Tivalì 2.0, the built-in kitchen designed by Dante Bonuccelli in 2004, revolutionized the concept of "Everything in a Small Space." The design philosophy behind Tivalì 2.0 aimed to create a kitchen that could make the most of an internal linear space ranging from 2.40 to 3 meters. It focuses on the effect and the pinnacle of kitchen design, similar to the performance of an actor on a stage. Just like a concealed stage, Tivalì 2.0 appears as a closed kitchen, hiding its precious contents until the big folding doors that reveal the scene within. The patented sliding door mechanism has been revolutionised, losing the base and the lower carriage, but without forfeiting the fluidity of the sliding effect. Tivalì 2.0 represents, without equal, the embodiment of the perfect blend of history, technological innovation, patents, and timeless elegance. "We imagined a kitchen inside an independent "object" and not as a series of items of furniture in a room. This "object" can be freely positioned in the space, following the concepts of the modern movement of a fluid house, without walls or doors, like those designed by Le Corbusier o Mies van der Rohe." Dante Bonuccelli
